DEVELOP ON RED CLAY

For a tennis player aiming to play at a competitive junior tennis level, finding the successful way to play on the red clay court surface becomes an essential. The hard court surface incentivizes an excessively aggressive and fast play style for a player, while the red clay surface makes the player think in a more strategic way to claim the point, as the red clay surface promotes slower and higher bouncing balls. Omni surface is a surface only found in Japan that uses sand instead of red clay. Hence, it is not a surface found and played in other countries of the world. Finally, the red clay surface not only does create the space for strategic thinking, but also creates room for improved top spin shot quality. Serbia tour opportunity will build up the foundation necessary for players through the daily practice on the red clay courts. Competitive players participate in 4 tournaments during the junior time being. Through playing matches against players from on an international scale, the player will have the chance to understand where they stand against players around the world and how those individuals play. Key of this Tour: - Day-to-day practice on the red clay courts - Enhanced racket technique, cardio and mental endurance, strategic thinking on the court - Matches against Top players of the European and Serbian Junior Tournament. - Building up the skills and the hunger to win necessary for a pro tennis player - Many practice match opportunities with Serbian players
